"My Teacher is Like a Mirror": The Students' Perspectives on Non-Native English Speaking Teacher

Agis Andriani Siliwangi University, Tasikmalaya, West Java

A good English language teacher is someone who has a balanced level A good English speaking teachers (NEST). This is appliple not only for native English speaking teachers (NESTs), but also for the ple not only to a position of English speaking teachers (NESTs), but also for the teachers as such is very important. This is because of English he non-NESTs, are required to teach a language they, particuthe non-NESTs, are required to teach a language which is not their nother tongue.

There are controversies regarding the role of non-NEST in the context There are in favor of NEST, whereas of teaching other arguments do not focus too much on NEST. For example, Llurda 1005:16) finds that Non-NESTs were perceived as relying on textbooks, applying differences between the first and second languages, using the first applying as a medium of instruction, being aware of negative transfer and psychological aspects of learning, being sensitive to the needs of students, being more efficient, knowing the students' background, and having exam preparation as the goal of their teaching. Meanwhile, Rajagopalan (2005: 283) put forward a statement which is not in favor of the Non-NEST. The statement was that "Non-native speaker teachers (NNSTs) are typically treated as second class citizens in the world of language teaching."

On the other hand, taking a stand in between the two kinds of English teachers, Medgyes (1992: 340) argues that "natives and non-natives have an equal chance to become successful teachers, but the routes used by the two groups are not the same." Medgyes (1992: 349) also states that "The

Technical Knowledge

The students place their lecturer as a person who knows more about English by showing his or her abilities in all language skills, teaching using the way to teach the language and its context, and progressively improving those abilities by joining some academic forums. According to the students, a good English lecturer:

for teachers, their words suggest that respect for all forms of language used in the communities in which they teach is essential. At the same time, in all school settings, language is always the medium and sometimes the object of formal study. Often, teachers have a particular responsibility for certain aspects of language instruction, whether they be acquisition of native language literacy skills or skills in a second language.
